

ACCESSTOLAND

A European network of civic organisations securing land for agroecological farming.

Our network

Preserving land for local, agroecological farming is a growing issue in many parts of Europe. Agricultural land is declining, as a result of urban and infrastructure development. Competition is also growing, between farmers and between food and other uses (timber, agrofuels, fibres). As a result, farmland is ever more concentrated on large, intensive farms while small farms, which are the cornerstone of European food security and lively rural areas, and are best placed to provide local quality food and preserve the environment, are disappearing. At the same time, the retirement of a majority of farmers, and increasing difficulties to replace them, may result in further rural abandonment.

The Access to land network brings together grassroots organisations from across Europe to share experiences and promote the significance of access to land for agroecological transition and generational renewal. Established in 2012, it functions as an informal network of about 15 organisations.

Our aims:

- Share experiences, ideas and practical tools to support farmers in having access to land and engaging in a good land stewardship
- Connect grassroots initiatives and support the emergence of new ones
- Raise awareness of land issues, land as commons and grassroots initiatives among citizens, consumers, farmers' organisations, civil society organisations and policy-makers
- Network with and support other civil society organisations and social movements working on these issues

Member organisations:

Our members are field-based organisations from a range of Western and Eastern European countries. Some are focused on land while others have a broader scope. All are directly working with farmers and communities, and consider land as a common good. To pursue their goals, they have various approaches:

- Advising and supporting farmers and future farmers in their search for land
- Acquiring land, based on public and private investments and donations, and renting it to farmers via community farmland trusts and similar initiatives
- Making agreements with landowners in order to provide land on favourable terms to farmers,
- Preserving farmland and their ecosystems
- Advocating and fostering policy change
- Offering educational activities to citizens and other civil society organisations

Our impact:

Our network has already been successful in a number of ways:

- Consolidating existing organisations, through field visits (15) and experience-sharing activities, involving about 120 people from our organisations and partner organisations
- Fostering the development of new initiatives, such as Terra Franca (Catalonia), De Landgenoten (Flanders), CoolAND (Czech Republic) or the Scottish Farmland Trust (Scotland)

- Raising awareness about access to land issues and experiences in Europe, through public presentations (over 50 reaching about 4000 people), and networking meetings with other civil society organisations
